Students of Lviv Polytechnic open the VNS only to download files and submit work; questions, discussions and teamwork happen outside the platform.

Why?

Why does course life happen outside the VNS?

Because

Expand on your answer

The VNS does have a chat, but it is outdated and inconvenient, and students do not even know it exists: 0 group and 0 private conversations in a student account.

Why?

Why is the chat outdated and unknown to students?

Because

Expand on your answer

Communication is not part of how a VNS course works: the VNS is a content repository (lectures, PDFs, assignments and grades), and the old chat is a side feature.

Why?

Why is it only a content repository?

Because

Expand on your answer

It runs on a standard Moodle; every extra feature needs plugins, settings and support that the small admin team cannot provide.

Why?

Why can’t the university provide them?

Because

Expand on your answer

The VNS is run as an administrative tool for storing materials and grades; no one owns the learning experience, so no one plans or funds new features.

Why?

Why does no one own the learning experience?

Because

Expand on your answer

The needs of students and lecturers were never collected and analysed when the platform was set up.

Root cause

The learning platform was built without analysing its users’ needs: it stores content, its only chat is outdated and unnoticed, and it does not support teamwork and honest progress tracking.
